

Salute to Volunteers

DELRAY MEDICAL CENTER

Carolyn Slone

Carolyn Slone is more than just a volunteer at Delray Medical Center. Over the years, Slone has also been a patient and visitor. Her consistent positive experiences at the hospital motivated Slone to “give back,” and so she has. Slone currently volunteers in the hospital’s marketing department, where she dedicated five and a half years of service. She attends various community events hosted at Delray Medical Center and in the community. Slone is always willing to help in any and all ways, on any day or time. This includes participating in the “Healthy Conversations” lectures given by Delray Medical Center physicians and other staff members.

Slone is always motivated to build community relationships and foster health education and learning. She encourages others volunteer because there are so many ways to help. Delray Medical Center would like to thank Carolyn Slone for her commitment to the hospital and her ever-positive attitude towards the staff, patients and community.
